

Shift. Kenya's clean energy efforts lauded

■ A global environmental lobby has lauded Kenya's efforts in taking up renewable energy, especially wind power. Greenpeace Africa's executive director, Njeri Kabeberi (above), said the Lake Turkana wind power project was a good example of efforts in upscaling renewable energy in the country. "We salute the commitment of the Kenyan Government to transitioning from fossil fuels towards renewable energy. This is a good step towards sustainable development," she said yesterday.

[Nanjinia Wamuswa]